Hongkong, February 12th, 1889,

In writing upon the failure of the Sikki negotiations a few days ago, we remarked that the knowledge on the part of China that England had determined under no circumstances to allow the difficulty to imperil the friendly relations between the two countries was not calculated to facilitate the conclusion of the affair. We recall some remarks recently made by a Shanghai writer, which buted article in the N. C. There has been little insistence on rights, little aid to legitimate foreign enterprise, as shown in the Kuling business, but on the contrary pandering to Chinese conceit which, if not truly attributable to weakness, is so consider. ed by the Chinese. In one of the late Mr. GIDEOR NYE's pamphlets we lately came across a passage in which he spoke of England as the political monitress of China, veteran, "she remonstrates with-she does not fight-Chins." This has remained a true description of England's attitude towards China to the present day. But has for Saigon, with the Admiral on board. Ad not the policy been carried too far? To some extent the process of preparation has been going on for years past; the elective local assemblies which were established some time ago being well calculated to serve as a useful introduction to the exercise of those fuller political privileges which are now to be conferred. Little information seems to have been allowed to transpire as to the details of the constitution, but the parliament will, it is believed, be modelled on that of England. The es tablishment of the Senate in 1875 has paved the way for legislation by a deliberative assembly, while last year a Privy Council was established, and before that the nobles had been rehabilitated with a view, as was understood, to the establishment of a House of Peers. All are unanimous in describing were synonymous terms, and that boiled or the proximate cause of the latter Power's very prepared opium must be taken to mean opium exceptional action, to a feeling of umbrage that "fit for amoking" and of a kind which was officers lent by the French Government to serve ordinarily sold in Hongkong. The appellant contends that he held this opium under the German confreres, and the discrimination finally authority of the Opium Farmer, who permitted Opium Farmer under the Ordinance and grant from the Government was quite within his rights in licensing him to boil and prepare opium. It is also further contended that boiling to any degree takes the opium so boiled out of the category of raw opium, and that it would be an infringement of the monopoly of the Opium Farmer, on the part of any one who had not a license from him, to boil opium to any degree, or have it in his possession without such license, In October, 1886, there was an appeal from the magistrates on the question whether certain opium was beiled or prepared within the mean ing of section 2 of Ordinance 1 of 1884. The pium former was appellant, and Chan A luk. dealer in raw opium, the respondent. The charge was that the respondent had prepared opium without a license from the opium former. The magistrate dismissed the charge and stated a case for the opinion of this Court. The magistrate in that case stated "that opium boiled and | 11. a.m., he was walking in Queen's Road Cenprepared for smoking purposes undergoes an tral, near No. 5 Police Station. The Magistrate stated "that being of opinion that the Ordinance refers to the possession and custody of prepared opium which may be used for smoking and can be sold for that purpose within the colony to the detriment of the Opium Farmers, and being further of opinion that the Ordinance does not apbly to testing samples of raw opium and is not directed in any way against dealers in raw opinm. From my own notes it appears that the whole argument turned on the question whether the Opium referred to in Ordinance 1 of 1884 as boiled or prepared opium was or was not fit for smoking. The appellant argued that if opium was boiled in 1886, in which year he was appointed in any way his privilege was infringed. He also relied upon the proviso contained in Section 3 in favour of druggists and medical men. On the other band it was contended that what the legislature meant to protect the farmer in was the exclusive privilege of boiling and preparing | which demand they resisted and a disturbance onium so as to be fit for smoking, and of selling onium so boiled or prepared, i.e., fit for smoking. The Court, it was contended, must read in "fit for smoking" so as to place a reasonable interpretation on the Ordinauce. The words "boiled" and force, saying he would bring him before the "prepared" must have a definite meaning at | Council. The Sikh, however, declined to go tached to them so as to let the public know what | further than the Police Station, and there the was forbidden. The Court took the view of the Magistrate and that urged on behalf of the respondent and decided that boiled opium or pre-

It did not derogate from the Opium Farmer's privileges, for under it he had no limit placed on the amount he might boil and prepare, or having laugh quantities allowed them for testing complete proparation smoking, and that b diminished the legte demand much. In the month of Oclabor last she presented her daughter, three years old, to a woman named sink Aying. The child fell sick and she returned it to witness. The N. C. Daily News is indebted to a Chin king resident for the following account of the riot and its most probable origin. Some three or four months ago instructions were issued by the Chinkiang Municipal Council to the police to clear certain roads in the Concession, which had been taken possession of by crowds of pedlars, rowdies, and others. A Sikh constable was ordered to tell the crowd to "move on." followed. The interpreter in the American Consulate was on the scene, and caught hold of the Sikh and attempted to drag him away by Interpreter alleged that the Constable had insulted and assaulted him. The charge was pared opium meant opium fit for smoking, and afterwards investigated by the Council, and that the Opium Farmer had no monopoly and though nothing was proved against the constable, who was only carrying out his orders, he was him. Since that decision Ordinance 22 of reprimended, more to appease the Chinese than 1887 has been passed. Its object was "to anything else. This did, however, not appeare regulate and control the movement of raw the Interpreter, and from that time there was a very strong feeling against the Sikhs, the dismirgal of all of whom was demanded by the Charge, which demand the Council refused of rowd of noisy people and told or prespected and not being roder the control of the particular to go away. This man afterwards test sumples, after went to the Station and complained that he had been kicked by the Sikh. The occupanta Sikhs and eight Chinese constables, flew for their lives through the back door, and the mob left stauding on another, the crowd pulling quantity of raw opium hitherto supplied to Council, the crowd shouting that they wanted Mr. Gregson and Mr. David. They succeeded only in bringing back a few valuables from their houses, which did not appear to have suffered in most instances beyond having all their windows broken. The Concession, however, presented a very changed appearance, not a lamp was left standing, the roads were torn up in places, the railings and trees along the Bund pulled down. The mob on this occasion presented a much stronger inclination to do violence to foreigners than on the previous day, and stones were frequently thrown. In one scuffle Mr. Bean, we are told, was captured by the mob, and carried a short distance, but he was subsequently recaptured by the sailors and soldiers and put on board again.

The crowd had increased in dimensions since the provious day, and the Concession was entirely in their hands. The native officials were going short apparently trying to pacify the rictors, and the Chief Magistra o's chair was smashed and he himse f roughly handled. It seems that while the Consulate was burn ing about two hundred soldiers appeared on the scene, with fixed bayonets, of which they made no further use however than to loosen the bricks for the rioters to throw at the windows of other It was the general opinion that if the native authorities had sent a strong body of soldiers upon the scene at once instead of shilly-shallying after their wonted manner, the riot would have been easily repressed in the beginning. Strange to say the rioters did not interfere with the Castom House people or buildings, and nearly all the Customs' people with their wives and families have remained behind. The rest of the community, with the exception of General Jones, U. S. Consul, Messrs, Mansfield, H. B. lately flourishing little concession About the time the Ngankin was leaving Chinkiang, the mob were commending to burn down a number of Chinese houses beinging to Mr. Chu Yu-chee (of the China Merchants' Commany), of which Mr. Starkey is the agent.
